The second trace is a different issue which I reported and fixed - see #10793 to watch progress.

I still don't understand the cause of the original issue (NoMethodError private method `template' called for #<ProvisioningTemplate:0x007f3174bbf8f8>) but from traces I realized you're running several plugins and for some reason, different templating engine (haml) is available on your system. Could you please list all plugins that you have installed in your foreman instance? You can easily find them on /about page on tab plugins. Could you also try running the following command?

echo "puts ProvisioningTemplate.first.template" | foreman-rake console

So something must change the method scope since in core it's clearly a public accessor defined by AR (it's a database column). Or for some reason, your DB does not have such column. Could you check your SQL server - table templates if it has column with name template? Maybe some migration didn't finish correctly, what does following command prints out?

foreman-rake db:migrate --trace

#8 - 06/12/2015 12:32 PM - Matthew Ceroni

<http://projects.theforeman.org/issues/10793> should have fixed this. Let us know if that worked for you.

Daniel, this is different error. Note that it tries to call template method on ProvisioningTemplate and complains about it being private. This seems as some conflict with other gems. Matthew is this still an issue for you? On IRC you said you just need to extract templates which you did through DB.

#11 - 06/19/2015 06:17 AM - Marek Hulán

So it was caused by a bug in Sinatra which was used by some of your plugins. For more details, see the discussion at <https://groups.google.com/forum/#topic/foreman-dev/kQKPAaWc1sU>

This should be fixed in nightly soon when new Dynflow (0.7.9) gets into repository. Fixing Dynflow PR is at <https://github.com/Dynflow/dynflow/pull/154>
