Description
I was trying to troubleshoot why parts of the web UI were extremely slow (specifically, editing a host, or location) and noticed I am getting double calls in the logs, so 3s page loads, turn into 6, etc. seems there is even some duplication in the puppet node calls.

This is due to Turbolinks (#8802) I believe, since all of those page changes would result in JS being added or removed from the page - it loads the page initially, then reloads it when it realises it's different. This could be reduced by combining our JS files for frequently used pages.

The calls in the Puppet run are normal. Puppet 3 introduced a second /node/ call before uploading facts, as it calls the ENC earlier to determine which environment the host should be in, then it calls the ENC in the usual manner (which uploads facts).

For what it is worth, the page does not load until after the 2nd call. So pages that can take 3-4s to load are taking 6-8s.
