Description
Since our code base contains a good amount of javascript (4633 LOC in 76 files), we need some testing framework to ensure we do not get regressions on this code. Integration tests are slow to write and to execute, and hopefully unit testing our javascript code will make it more readable too. Jasmine is a good testing framework with a great plugin ecosystem and widely used in other projects for this same use case (Rails + js).

Fixes #13748 - Add testing tools for code under webpack

This commit adds jest as a tool to be used to test some of the code under webpack, supporting ES2015 via babel-polyfill.

The purpose of this is just to give the tools for other developers to test their javascript code.

By default, jest is automocking everything except for jQuery with this change
