Description

When no manifest is uploaded the subscriptions page still shows "Add subscription" buttons. Clicking on them takes users to the add subscription page showing empty view with:

- text saying "There are no Subscription Allocations to display" and wrong link to docs
 - a button "New subscription allocation" with a wrong link too
- Both informations are misleading. No allocation can be added until a manifest is imported. The empty view doesn't make much sense on this page.

Proposed solution:

When no manifest is imported:

- Disable "Add subscription" button in the top right toolbar with an appropriate tooltip message.
- Show different empty view on the subscriptions page saying "Import a Manifest to manage your Entitlements" or something similar and show "Manage Manifest" button (opening the corresponding modal on click) instead of "Add Subscriptions".
- Change the text in the add subscriptions empty view to something similar to the previous bullet. Hide the action button there.

By that the add subscriptions page should be effectively cut out when there's no manifest. The empty view for add subscriptions should be changed anyway, just in case.

Fixes #24129: fix subs. display when no manifest.

When there is no manifest:

- Disable "Add subscription" button in the top right toolbar with an appropriate tooltip message.
- Show different empty view on the subscriptions page saying "Import a Manifest to manage your Entitlements" or something similar and show "Manage Manifest" button.
- Change the text in the add subscriptions empty view to the above.
