Description
Currently we have --foreman-repo, --foreman-gpgcheck, --foreman-configure-epel-repo and --foreman-configure-scl-repo but the installer itself nowadays requires the SCL repo. EPEL is not really used anymore. That only leaves the repo itself and it's better to recommend users to use the foreman-release RPM for that. There are also similar parameters on the Proxy which is even more confusing because they come from the same repo, but you end up with the same yumrepo/apt files duplicated. Moving it to a standalone class for Puppet users is a good solution.

Fixes #29602 - Refactor repository handling

This removes the repo parameters from the main class, in favor of a standalone class that can be included. It uses an anchor because that can be collected in the main class to keep the correct dependency chaining while using composition.

Refs #29602 - Remove dropped repository parameters

Since theforeman-foreman 15.0.0 these parameters no longer exist and by default no repository setup is done.
