Description
For Rails 3.2.8 compatibility, we've changed a few instance of pluck(:column) to specify the table name to remove ambiguity (which 3.2.13 and higher can cope with). These can be reverted on Rails 4 or similar.

It should probably be reverted to pluck(:column), see Oops, thanks Petr. The string was laziness, I hadn't realised it was different!

I'm not sure I want this.

specifying the table name in situations where there's a join makes a lot of sense to me. it's more verbose, and feels right to me. let's keep it like it is.
