Description

Setting which controls how the host is saved in the database results in the inability to control whether the host form displays the host's FQDN or just name. It also results in issues when Ansible creates duplicate hosts.

fixes #36160 - Redefine append domain names setting

This PR aims to unify the format of host names stored in the database and the way they are displayed.
With this change, the name of the host is always going to be stored with the domain name appended.
The setting formerly named `append_domain_name_for_hosts` is now renamed to `display_fqdn_for_hosts` because it will only impact how the names are displayed from now.
This means dashboards and breadcrumbs are going to display the whole FQDN if you choose to.
