Description
We often do this in our templates:
<pre>@host.params['enable-puppetlabs-repo'] &amp;&amp; @host.params['enable-puppetlabs-repo'] == 'true'</pre>
this could be written as <pre>@host.param_true?('enable-puppetlabs-repo')</pre>
I am going to do this small patch and after this is merged, let's raise a ticket for community templates to use this after 1.4 release.

Other ideas: We could define "snippet_if_exist" method for rendering snippets and not issuing errors when snippet does not exist. And offer a way of determining current template name - "template_name".

This way we could add this bit into our community templates to all installation sections, so users can easily "override" and add own commands there:

```
<%= snippet_if_exist "#{template_name} Post" %>
```

By creating "Community Kickstart Post" user can add own commands there and another community template import will not destroy this.
