Description

Puppet 3.5 added support for an environmentpath (very much like our own default /etc/puppet/environments/) and 3.6 adds an environment.conf to configure the modulepath etc within each environment.

The installer should support deploying environments this style when possible, as it'll be the only option in Puppet 4.

Revision 23978618 - 07/28/2014 07:32 AM - Dominic Cleal fixes #4700 - deploy directory environments on Puppet 3.6 or higher

- $server_dynamic_environments is deprecated when server_directory_environments is enabled, set $server_environments = [] instead for a similar effect
- environment.conf deployed if custom manifest, config_version etc supplied to puppet::server::env instead of puppet.conf fragment
- basemodulepath set in puppet.conf to the value of server_common_modules_path, which had /etc/puppet/modules added to match the new Puppet default
- $environment_timeout added to puppet::server::env

- Status changed from New to Ready For Testing

First part is up here: https://github.com/theforeman/puppet-puppet/pull/158

There are some further changes I noticed in the PR comments that need implementing, and finally we need to change the default to 'true' on Puppet 3.6+.
