Description
"Recently" (last week or two?), Chrome has started filling in the root password field again on the host edit page, which means your host's new password becomes "changeme" or whatever you happen to have saved. It appears this is a deliberate feature, even though we set autocomplete=off since #2607: http://www.theregister.co.uk/2014/04/09/chrome_makes_new_password_grab_in_version_34/ http://www.techno360.in/how-to-enable-autocompleteoff-feature-in-chrome-34/

Fixes #5468 - prevent Chrome from autofilling passwords

<http://code.google.com/p/chromium/issues/detail?id=352347> is the main bug report, which while being depressing reading, does appear to be moving in the right direction.

This is annoying and I wonder if we are able to get rid of this by adding some random suffix to the password field name.

#3 - 08/15/2014 09:41 AM - Dominic Cleal

I don't think it cares about the field name (e.g. it fills in a password from the user field into one called "root_pass"). Some say you can add hidden fields to have it fill those in instead, but eugh.
