Description
Cloned from https://bugzilla.redhat.com/show_bug.cgi?id=1112182
Description of problem: I created a simple user in "Any context" mode and did not assign any location, org and roles. But following menus are visible to that user. Ideally user shouldn't be allowed to have access to any of menu items without any permission. Though content menu doesn't list sub menus but Hosts menu shows "All Hosts" and user can see the created hosts. Version-Release number of selected component (if applicable): sat6 beta snap10 compose2 How reproducible: always Steps to Reproduce: 1. Login with admin user 2. create a user in "Any context" and do not assign location and org 3. logout with admin user and login with newly created user Actual results: User can see Content menu and Hosts --> All hosts Expected results: user shouldn't be allowed to have access to any of menu items without any permission Additional info:

It reads to me like the issue is with the menu system not removing the top-level "Content" menu when the user has permission for nothing inside the Katello plugin.
