Description

Cloned from https://bugzilla.redhat.com/show_bug.cgi?id=1112255
Description of problem:
I'm not sure if its a bug or a expected behaviour, but I didn't find "Repository" Resource type. I can see "Product" and it has permissions like: view, edit, create etc.

Let's say I want user A to promote and publish a repo to next env. Then there is no way to select repository.

OR

If I want to sync a specific repo. OR if I want a userA to upload contents to repoA

Version-Release number of selected component (if applicable):
sat6 beta snap10 compose2

How reproducible:
always

Steps to Reproduce:
1. Create role
2. add permissions, select resource type
3.

Actual results:
Missing resource type "Repository" while adding permissions to selected role

Expected results:
Repository resource type should be available

Revision 62caf068 - 07/09/2014 02:22 PM - Walden Raines

Fixes #6553/BZ111225: add "repositories" to product resource type name.

There was some confusion about Repository permissions being underneath Products. This commit simply updates the resource type name to make it obvious that repositories are also affected by these permissions.
